

RED CROSS PUBLIC HEALTH NURSE

While the war left behind it much in the way of shattered civilization and ruined ideals of life, it brought some revelations that, if they are conscientiously heeded, will in some measure justify the terrible cost of the war. This is particularly true in the United States where fortunately, coming into the war last we lost least along the lines where other nations suffered most severely.

To us the war brought some revelations absolutely staggering in their significance. We were not prepared to be told that twenty-one and two-tenths per cent of our men of draft age were physically unable to undertake military training.

It is strange that for years a nation that has boasted of being thoroughly abreast of human progress should have been content that a million and a third of its people should die every year—a large percentage of them needlessly, since they died as a result of preventable sickness—an evidence of defective civilization.

It is somewhat comforting to know that as a result of this war revelation it has been demonstrated that this great loss of human asset is not by any means necessary—that even the most fundamental endeavor for betterment immediately registered results that show the possibilities for future education.

Already the death-rate throughout the country has been lowered considerably. The lessons learned during the war regarding food values, nutrition and dietetics have been incorporated into the making of stronger and better nourished life.

In this work the American Red Cross has taken a clearly-defined and successful part. Avoiding scrupulously the danger of overlapping activities, shunning fields of effort already fully occupied, refusing any competition with existing organizations, it has found in the mission and the work of the Public Health nurse a field peculiarly its own.

Historically and practically, Nursing Service is fundamental to the work of the Red Cross. It is the coordinating, registering and distributing agency for a profession that both in war and peace has proven itself absolutely necessary to the general safety.

There now are twelve hundred and twenty-two trained Red Cross Public Health nurses assigned to the service of chapters and communities through the country.

The Red Cross Public Health nurse is the evangelist of better health conditions. The task of the Public Health nurse is not merely bedside nursing. It is the informing and instructing particularly of the women of the community whose charge and responsibility is home-making and home-keeping in regard to the things that pertain to the development and protection of individual and community life. It covers such things as prenatal and maternal nursing, child welfare and the care of sick children, industrial welfare and always health education. It flings a challenge square in the face of humanity's most dreaded foe—DISEASE.

The weapons for such a conflict are within the reach of every citizen endowed with common sense and average intelligence. They have to do, not only with the treatment of sickness when it really comes, but with that which is far more important—the prevention of sickness. Public Health nursing strikes directly at the sources from which disease springs; it endeavors to instruct people in their own homes as to how to look after minor illness whose elimination will prevent serious sickness.

Crawford county for a time, since June of this year was without a public health nurse and the loss of one was keenly felt especially in the schools. Miss Judy of Chicago recently accepted the position and already is going from home to home giving advice in nursing. Miss Judy came to Grayling mainly through the local chapter, who pay part of her salary while the Village and the Board of Supervisors pay the remainder.

Your membership in the Red Cross helps to keep a nurse in our community. The time to join is near at hand—November 11 to 30th.

TO THE VOTING PUBLIC.

It has been brought to my attention that there is a rumor circulated at this time that I have selected and named certain persons whom I would appoint as deputy officers in event of my election to the office of sheriff. This rumor is entirely without authority, as no such action has been considered by me nor has any person been consulted in respect of this or any similar appointment. Peter F. Jorgenson.

TO THE VOTERS OF CRAWFORD COUNTY WOMEN AS WELL AS MEN.

It is your duty to get out and vote for sheriff at the coming election, the first Tuesday in November.

We have reason to believe that you will give reasonable time and thought to making the best selection for the sheriff's office. In so doing you will weigh the candidate's character, his willingness to attend the duties of the office of sheriff. This is no easy man's job if the duties are to be properly administered. It takes a man with ability to stop violators of the law, whose nerve is of the quality that makes a good officer. We have reasons to believe, regardless of party politics, that

PETER F. JORGENSEN

IS the only feasible candidate for the office of sheriff and should be elected on Nov. 7th. Every voter should make it their business to cast a vote for PETER F. JORGENSEN.

Mr. Jorgenson has been a resident of Crawford county 38 years, and has been a tax payer for thirty-two years. He has served as highway commissioner for seven terms, under seven different boards and each have had the highest praise for his work. Mr. Jorgenson is honorable and efficient in the performance of his duties as an officer, always looking to the interest of his COUNTY, in a just and upright manner. His work will stand the test of honor. Mr. Peter F. Jorgenson has not made any statements which he does not intend to fulfill. He is of that sturdy type which will cause violators of the law to have a great deal of respect for him as sheriff. We know that Mr. Jorgenson will clean up the violations and maintain a greater respect for the law than there has been in the past few years. We do not believe that any opponent of Mr. Jorgenson has those sturdy qualities of character and ability to perform the duties of sheriff.

CAST YOUR VOTE FOR PETER F. JORGENSEN, FOR SHERIFF.

COUNTIES SHOW APPRECIATION OF BUREAU'S WORK

That the people of Northeastern Michigan fully appreciate the work which the Northeastern Michigan Development bureau is doing in bringing tourists and new settlers to the section of the state is made evident by the fact that the boards of supervisors of all but two of the sixteen counties belonging to the bureau have already made their usual appropriations for the bureau while the two which have not acted have promised that the matter will be attended to at their next sessions.

Saginaw county, which dropped its membership several years ago was again given an opportunity to join by secretary Marston, but turned down his proposition flatly in spite of the fact that Saginaw business men enjoy a heavy trade with the people to the north of them and are benefitting largely by the development of the northern counties as farming and stock-raising territory and also secure a large amount of business from the tourists, most of whom pass thru Saginaw in coming into this section of the state.

Agricultural Agent R. D. Bailey left Monday for Lansing where he was called to attend a meeting of the county agents of Michigan.

A postal card received from Ross N. Martin, dated at Washington, D. C. Oct. 28, says, "Lovely weather here on the Potomac." Further he extends his best regards to his friends. Mr. Martin is taking a few weeks vacation in the east.

MOOSE NOW HAVE AUXILIARY.

Grayling Chapter No. 701 was instituted Monday evening at the Temple Theatre by Deputy Grand Regent Margaret F. Jungels.

After the institution the following officers were installed for the ensuing year: Senior Regent—Catherine Bowen. Past Regent—Minnie Egan. Junior Regent—Hazel Ewalt. Chaplain—Florence Schreck. Treasurer—Jennie Sorenson. Recorder—Laura McLeod. Guide—Mae Ketzbeck. Sentinel—Gladys Cody. Argus—Nora Wheeler.

Thereafter all retired to the dining room where a rabbit-supper was served by a committee of the Moose Lodge to the women and their husbands. Short talks were made by Dictator Matson, Past Dictator Petersen, Secretary Cody and Deputy Jungels. The new chapter will meet every two weeks, the next meeting to be held Monday evening, November 6th at 7:30 p. m.

THE FILM STORY TOLD ON FILM AT THE OPERA HOUSE

The Opera House announcement that the big Eastman film, "A Trip Through the Grand East," will appear on its program November 5 and 6, is of special interest to movie fans.

The film story introduces every step in the process of film making from the cotton as it comes from the cotton fields and the silver from the refineries, to the tiny strips of ribbon on which the picture itself is shown.

The theme of the picture is of direct interest to every movie fan whose knowledge of the motion picture world has heretofore been more or less confined to stars and producers. With the names and habits of these he is tolerably familiar, but comparatively little has been told of the way the film itself, without which movies could not exist, is made.

The picture seeks to remedy this defect in popular knowledge by showing how the cotton is made into the film base; how the silver is mixed with the potassium-bromide and gelatine to light sensitive emulsion with which the film is coated; how the coating is done, the sheets of film slit into strips of standard width, perforated, reeled and packed ready for the producer's studio, and the taking of the fan's favorite star.

The industrial aspects of the picture are relieved by delightful comedy drawings from the pen of that clever film cartoonist, Paul M. Felton which makes the picture as entertaining as it is instructive.

JASPER WEST DEAD.

Jasper Newton West, a former resident of Grayling, died at Wauson, Ohio October 24th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Sweeney, where he had resided. He was born in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, April 10, 1852. At the age of 19 he came to Michigan and located at Royal Oak. A few years later he came to Grayling where he resided until 1893, working here as a laborer. He was an uncle of Grant and Willis Shellenbarger and E. R. Clark of this city. Mr. West went out of this life leaving a splendid reputation as a man and a citizen. Grant Shellenbarger was in attendance at his funeral.

U.S. INDEPENDENT IN NEAR EAST ROW

WANTS MINORITIES PROTECTED

Note Shows Concern for Humanitarian Rights and Educational and Religious Institutions.

Paris—The reply of the American government to the invitation of the Allied powers that America participate in the peace conference at Lausanne for settlement of Near Eastern questions was presented to Premier Poincaré Monday evening by the American ambassador, Myron T. Herrick. The substance of the reply was made public.

After pointing out that the principal purpose of the proposed conference will be the drawing up of a treaty of peace with Turkey and dealing with problems resulting from the state of belligerency between the Allied powers, Turkey and Greece, the reply says:

"The United States does not desire to participate in the final peace negotiations or assume responsibility for the political and territorial adjustments which may be effected, for the reason that it is neither at war with Turkey nor party to the armistice of 1918.

"The United States government, however, does not desire to leave the impression that United States interests are less entitled to consideration than those of any other power; neither is it desirous of relinquishing rights enjoyed in common with other powers or is it unconcerned with the humanitarian interests involved.

"Among the points to be taken into consideration are:

"First, the protection under proper guarantees of philanthropic, educational and religious institutions.

"Second, appropriate undertakings as regards freedom of opportunity, without discrimination of special privileges for commercial purposes.

"The United States, while it desires to protect its rights and assure a policy of the open door, has no intention of seeking for itself or its nationals a position of special privilege. It further desires to assure the protection of Americans who wish to continue relief, educational or humanitarian work which has been begun on in the Near East for generations and which under present conditions would appear to be more essential than ever."

NEW ITALIAN PREMIER HAILED

Signor Mussolini Confers With King Emanuel On Problems.

Rome—Benito Mussolini, chief of the Fascist and the new premier of Italy, arrived in Rome at 11 o'clock Monday morning. He was greeted at the railroad station amidst the wildest enthusiasm by tens of thousands of people who acclaimed him the savior of the country.

He conferred with King Victor Emanuel for an hour immediately after his arrival, and he then proceeded to the Hotel Savoy, opposite the Tribune's Rome bureau, which was full of American tourists cheering him. Signor Mussolini made a short address from the balcony of the hotel, in which he said:

"The Fascist are completely victorious. I have come to Rome not only to give Italy a ministry—but a true government. In a few hours you will have such a government. Long live King Victor Emanuel. Long live victorious Italy. Long live Fascist!"

"EARL" ALSO WANTED IN CANADA

Warrant Charges Fraud in Sale of Worthless Stock.

Charlevoix, Mich.—A warrant for the arrest of A. J. Walker Greig, "Earl of Dunblane," on trial before Judge George W. Sample and jury here for larceny by conversion issued in St. Thomas, Ont., by Police-Magistrate C. F. Maxwell, was received Monday by Sheriff George W. Weaver, of Charlevoix county. It was accompanied by a letter from D. T. Augustine, chief constable of Aylmer, Elgin county, Ont., asking that the "earl" be held for the Canadian authorities in the event of his actual arrest here.

The warrant alleges that Greig "fraudulently converted to his own use," $350 paid to him by a resident of Aylmer for stock in the Title Guaranty and Casualty company, the charge being similar to that on which he is now being tried.

MARRIAGE LAXITY IS MENACE

Bishop Sumner Declares U. S. Ranks Next to Japan.

Chicago—"Next to Japan, we are the worst nation in the world so far as the sacredness with which we regard the marital tie is concerned," said Bishop Walter T. Sumner, of Oregon, who is visiting in Chicago. "Modern marriages are virtually nothing more than 'trial marriages' he continued, and the United States is in danger of becoming the most dissolute nation in the world."

The regular monthly meeting of the Ladies Aid Society of the Methodist Memorial church will be held Friday afternoon, November 3 at 2:30.

U. OF M. OUTGROWING ITS CAPACITY

IMPERATIVE NEED FOR NEW BUILDINGS AND EQUIPMENT IS FELT.

The University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, wonderful as it already is, is being forced to grow and expand at a tremendous rate due to the demands thrust upon it. The student body has grown from a membership of four or five thousand of a few years ago to more than eleven and a half thousand and is still rapidly growing. When the University opened last month more than a thousand was added to its average attendance of a year ago.

In an address attended by the editor of this paper, and given by President Burton of the university, the latter gave an outline of the building plans for that institution, and told of the great needs that are required in order to keep the U. of M. up to even the demands that are made upon it. The old literary building that has been in use for fifty years, must be replaced with a modern structure and of much greater dimensions. The medical department is sadly in need of larger quarters. The University hospital, which 18,000 patients passed during the last year, is far short of room and equipment. Many other branches of that great university have long since outgrown themselves and more land must be purchased and more buildings erected in order to supply the needs of the day.

President Burton stated that the Board of regents had asked the State legislature of 1921 for an appropriation of 8 million dollars and that there had been appropriated only but about half that amount. This year the proper university authorities will again ask the legislature to supply the necessary finances to keep Michigan university where it should be; to provide adequate resources for the training of our boys and girls, the future men and women who will soon have to conduct the affairs of the nation. He made it plain to the large body of newspaper publishers of Michigan, to whom he was speaking, that the University cannot stand still and that provision must be made for keeping it in the front ranks among educational institutions of America, where it may continue to maintain the high educational standards for which Michigan has been noted, and predicted that the time was not far distant when it would be second to none.

A few days spent about the campus is indeed an inspiration to anyone, and the very air about the place and the bright and pleasant spirit of the students and members of the university faculty, as they go about their tasks, leave those that will long be pleasantly and appreciatively remembered.

CHRIST HENDRICKSON.

The remains of Christ Hendrickson, who passed away at his home in Grand Rapids Tuesday of last week were brought to Grayling for burial, the funeral being held Friday afternoon with services in the Danish Lutheran church. Rev. Kjolheide conducted the service, and the church choir rendered many pretty hymns. As Mr. Hendrickson was a former well known resident of Grayling, there was a large congregation of old friends and neighbors of the family in attendance at the funeral. Interment was in Elmwood cemetery. Relatives from out of the city, who accompanied the remains here were the deceased's wife, Mrs.

GRAYLING TO HAVE NEW LAUNDRY

NEW ENTERPRISE TO OPEN IN DANISH GYMNASIUM BUILDING.

What will be good news to the people of Grayling and surrounding vicinity is the announcement that Grayling is to have a laundry in the very near future.

The proprietors of the new enterprise are Mr. Charles Wilber and his son-in-law Mr. George Wendt of Detroit. These gentlemen have rented the Danish Gymnasium building and are installing new laundry equipment and expect to be ready for business about the middle of November. The equipment they will use was first ordered by Thomas Cassidy, Landlord of Shoppensagon Inn, who had decided to install it in the basement of the inn, but later found out that there was not room for the machinery and Messrs. Wilber and Wendt grasped the opportunity to purchase it, thus avoiding delay in opening their enterprise. The gentlemen are busy getting the building in shape.

A laundry has been a long needed utility in Grayling, for proprietors of the hotels and other institutions who

For once a ray of cheer came to him. The Rodaines had known of this strike long before he ever went to that office in Denver. They had waited long enough to have their assays made and had completed their first shipment to the smelter. There was no necessity that they buy the Blue Poppy mine. Therefore, it was simply another trick to break him, to lead him up to a point of high expectations, then, with a laugh at his discomfiture, throw him down again? His shoulders straightened as he reached the outside air, and he moved close to Harry as he told him his conjectures. The Cornishman bobbed his head.

"I never thought of it that way," he agreed. "But it could explain a lot of things. They want to beat us and they don't care how. It's a person to be disappointed. That's it. I always said you'd go good 'ead on you! That's it. Let's go back to the Blue Poppy."

Back they went, once more to descend the shaft, once more to follow the trail along the drift toward the opening of the stope. And there, where loose earth covered the place where a skeleton once had rested, Fairchild took off his coat and rolled up his sleeves.

"Harry," he said, with a new determination, "this vein doesn't look like much, and the mine looks worse. But if you're game, I'm game, and we'll work the thing until it breaks us."

"You've said it. If we'll anything, fine and well—if we can turn out five thousand dollars' worth of stuff before the trial comes up, then we can sell the mine under the direction of the court, turn over that money for a cash bond, and get the deeds back. If we can't, and if the mine breaks out, then we can't lose anything but a lot of 'topos and time. But ere goes. We'll double-back. I've got a big hammer 'ere. You'll drill the drill for awhile and turn it while I sling the sledge. Then you take the hammer and let 'em have mercy on my 'ands if you miss."

Fairchild obeyed. Hour after hour they worked. Then, as the afternoon grew late, Harry disappeared far down the drift to return with a handful of greasy, candlelike things, wrapped in waxed paper.

"I knew that dynamite of yours couldn't be shipped in time, so I bought a little up 'ere," he explained, as he cut one of the sticks in two with a pocketknife and laid the pieces to one side. Then out came a coil of fuse, to be cut to its regular lengths and inserted in the copper-covered caps of fulminate of mercury. Harry, always his contempt for the dangerous things by crimping them about the fuse with his teeth, while Fairchild, sitting on a small pile of muck nearby, looked on with a grin that Harry only grinned behind his big mustache and went on.

Out came his pocketknife again as he slit the waxed paper of the fulminate sticks; then, after another look at the dynamite, one after another the charges were shoved into the holes. Harry tamping them into place with a steel rod, instead of with the usual wooden affair, his mustache brushing his shoulder, as he turned to explain the virtues of dynamite when handled by an expert.

"It's all in the way you do it," he announced. "If you don't strike fire with a steel rod, it's fine."

"But if you do?"

"Oh, then," Harry laughed. "Then it's flowers and a funeral—after they've finished picking you up."

One after another he pressed the dynamite charges tight into the drill holes and tamped them with muck wrapped in a newspaper that he dragged from his hip pocket. Then he lit the fuses from his lamp and stood a second in assurance that they all were spluttering.

"Now we run!" he announced, and they hurried, side by side, down the drift tunnel until they reached the shaft. "Far enough," said Harry.

A long moment of waiting. Then the earth quivered and a muffled, booming roar came from the distance. Harry stared at his carbide lamp.

"One," he announced. "Then, 'Two.' Three, four and five followed, all counted seriously, carefully by Harry. Finally they turned back along the drift toward the stope, the acid odor of dynamite smoke cutting at their nostrils as they approached the spot where the explosion had occurred. There Harry stood in silent contemplation for a long time, holding his carbide over the pile of ore that had been torn from the vein above.

"It ain't much," came at last. "Not more'n a ton. We won't get rich at that rate. And besides," he looked upward—"we ain't even going to be getting that pretty soon. It's pinching out."

Fairchild followed his gaze, to see in the torn rock above him only a narrow streak now, fully an inch and a half narrower than the vein had been before the powder holes had been drilled. It could mean only one thing: that the bet had been played and lost, that the vein had been one of those freak affairs that start out with much promise, seem to give hope of eternal riches, and then gradually dwindle to nothing. Harry shook his head.

"It won't last."

"Not more than two or three more shots," Fairchild agreed.

"You can't tell about that. It may run that way all through the mountain—but what's a four-inch vein? You can go up 'ere in the Argonaut tunnel and find 'art a dozen of them things that they don't even take the trouble to mine. That is, unless they run 'igh in silver." He picked up a chunk of the ore from the muck pile where it had been deposited and studied it intently.

"But I don't see any pure silver sticking out in this stuff."

"But it must be here somewhere. I don't know anything about mining—don't know veins sometimes pinch out and then show up later on?"

"Where they do—sometimes. But it's a gamble."

"That's all we've had from the behave any time unless something bobs up sudden like."

Then, by common consent, they laid away their working clothes and left the mine, to wander down the gulch and to the boarding house. After dinner they chatted a moment with Mother Howard, then went upstairs, each to his room. An hour later Harry knocked at Fairchild's door, and entered, the evening paper in his hand.

"Here's something more that's nice," he announced, pointing to an item on the front page. It was the announcement that a general grand jury was to be convened late in the summer and that one of its tasks would be to seek to unravel the mystery of the murder of Sissie Larsen!

Fairchild read it with morbidity. Trouble seemed to have become more than occasional, and further than that, it appeared to descend upon him at just the times when he could least resist it. He made no comment; there was little that he could say. Again he read the item and again, finally to turn the page and breathe sharply. Before him was a six-column advertisement, announcing the strike in the Silver Queen mine and also appearing the word that a two-million-dollar company would be formed, one million in stock to represent the mine itself, the other to be subscribed to exploit this new find as it should be exploited. Glowing words told of the possibilities of the Silver Queen. Of, fices had been opened; everything had been planned in advance and the advertisement written before the town was aware of the big discovery up Kentucky gulch. All of it Fairchild read with a feeling he could not down—a feeling that Fate, somehow, was beating the cards from the bottom, and that trickery and treachery and a venomous nature were the necessary ingredients, after all, to success. He flushed the last line, looked at the list of officers, and gasped.

For there, following one another, were three names, two of which Fairchild had expected. But the other—They were president and general manager, R. B. (Squint) Rodaine; secretary-treasurer, Maurice Rodaine; and first vice president—Miss Anita Natalie Richmond!

After that, Fairchild heard little that Harry said as he fumbled on about plans for the future. He sat and stared, until finally his partner said good-night and left the room.

That name could mean only one thing: that she had consented to become a partner with them; that they had seen her, after all. Now, even a different light came upon the meeting with Fairchild in the room, and a different view to Fairchild. What if she had been playing their game all along? What if she had been merely a tool for them; what if she had sent Fairchild in their direction, to leave everything he and Harry knew? Had not another lawyer played the friendship racket, in an effort to buy the Blue Poppy mine?

And here Fairchild smiled grimly. From the present prospects, it would seem that the gain would have been all on his side, for certainly there was little to show now toward a possibility of the Blue Poppy ever being worth anything near the figure which it had been offered for. And yet, if that offer had not been made as some sort of alibi, why had it been made at all? Was it because Rodaine knew that wealth did lie concealed there? Fairchild suddenly took hope. He clenched his hands and he spoke, to himself, to the darkness and to the spirits of discouragement that were all about him:

"If it's there, we'll find it—if we have to work our fingers to the bone, if we have to starve and die there—we'll find it!"

With that determination, he went to bed, to awake in the morning filled with a desire to reach the mine, to claw at its vitals with the sharp-edged drills, to swing the heavy sledge until his shoulders and back ached.

He finished the last line and gasped, to send the roaring charges of dynamite digging deeper and deeper into that thinning vein. And Harry was beside him every step of the way.

A day's work, the booming charges, and they returned to the stope to find that the vein had neither lessened nor grown greater. Another day—and one after that, the vein remained the same.

Squint Rodaine had established his office in a small, vacant store building on the main street, and Fairchild could see, as he went to and from his work, a constant stream of townspersons as they made their way to the stope to give their money into the keeping of the bearded man and to trust to the future for wealth. It galled Fairchild, it made his hate stronger than ever. As for the girl who was named as vice president—

He saw her, day after day, riding through town in the same automobile that he had helped retire on the Denver road. But now she did not look at him; now she pretended that she did not see him. She had gone over to the Rodaines, she was engaged to marry the chalky-faced, hook-nosed son and she was vice president of their two-million-dollar mining corporation. Fairchild did not even strive to find a meaning for it all; women are women, and men do well sometimes if they diagnose themselves.

The summer began to grow old, and Fairchild felt that he was aging with it. The bank deposits were thinning, and the vein was thinning with it. Slowly but surely, as they fought the strip of ore in the rocks was being pinched out. Soon would come the time when they could work it no longer. And then—but Fairchild did not like to think about that.

September came, and with it the grand jury. But here for once was a slight ray of hope. The body of twelve good men and true were themselves out with other matters and adjourned without even taking up the mystery of the Blue Poppy mine. But the joy of Fairchild and Harry was short-lived. In the long, legal phraseology of the jury's report was the recommendation that this important subject be the first for inquiry by the next grand inquisitorial body to be convened—and the threat still remained.

But before the two men were now realities which were worse even than threats, and Harry turned from his staling late one afternoon to voice the most important.

"We'll start single-lacking tomorrow," he announced with a little sigh. "In the evening, the vein's pinched down until we ain't even getting day laborer's wages out of it—and it's October now."

October! October—and winter on the way. October—and only a month until the time when Harry must face a jury on four separate charges, any one of which might send him to Canon City for the rest of his days. Fairchild's hopes lay inert. He was only working now because a great, strong, big-shouldered man had come from Cornwall to help him and was willing to fight it out to the end. October—and the announcement had said that a certain girl would be married in the late fall, a girl who never looked in his direction any more, who had allowed her name to become affiliated with that of the Rodaines, now nearing the task of completing their two million. October!

For a long moment, Fairchild said nothing, then as Harry came from the staling, he moved to the older man's side.

"I didn't quite catch the idea," came at last. Harry pointed with his sledge.

"I'm saying nothing the vein. It keeps turning to the left. It strikes me that it might have branched off from the main body and that there's a bigger vein over there some'er. We'll just have to make a try for it. It's our only chance."

"And if we fail to find it there?"

"If it ain't there—we're whipped!"

"It was the first time that Harry had said the word seriously. Fairchild pretended not to hear. Instead, he picked up a drill, looked at its point, then started toward the small force which they had erected just at the foot of the little raise leading to the stope. There Harry joined him; together they heaved the long pieces of steel and pounded their biting faces to the sharpness necessary to drilling in the hard rock of the hanging wall, tempering them in the bucket of water near by, working silently, slowly, hampered by the weight of defeat. They were being whipped; they felt it in every atom of their beings. But they had not given up their fight. Two blows were left in the struggle, and two blows they meant to strike before the end came. The next morning they started at their new task, each drilling holes at points five feet apart in the hanging wall, to send them in as far as possible, then at the end of the day to blast them out, tearing away the rock and stopping their work at drilling that they might muck away the refuse. And day after day, each, without mentioning it to the other, was tortured by the thought of that offer of riches, that mysterious proffer of wealth for the Blue Poppy mine—tortured like men who are chained in the sight of gold and cannot reach it. For the offer carried always the hint that wealth was just somewhere, that Squint Rodaine knew it, but that they could not find it. Either that—or fat failure. Either wealth that would glad Squint a hundredfold for his purpose, or a sneer that would answer their offer to sell. And each man gritted his teeth and said nothing. But they worked on.

October gave up its fight. The first day of November came, to find the chamber a wide, vacuous thing now, sheltering stone and refuse and two struggling men—nothing more. Fairchild ceased his labors and mopped his forehead, dripping from the heat engendered by frenzied labor. A long moment, then:

"Harry."

"Aye."

"I'm going after the other side. We've been playing a half-horsed game here."

"I've been thinking that, Boy."

"Then I'm going to tackle the foot wall. I was at the bank today."

"Yeh."

"My balance is just two hundred."

Harry claved at his mustache. They're nearing the end, Boy. Tackle the foot wall."

They said no more. Fairchild with drew his drill from the "swimmer" or straightforward powder hole and turned far to the other side of the chamber, where the sloping foot wall showed for a few feet before it dived under the muck and refuse. Spot after spot he prospected, suddenly to stop and bend forward. At last came an exclamation, surprised, wondering:

walked to Fairchild's side. The younger man pointed.

"Do you ever fill up drill holes with cement?" he asked.

"Not as I know of. Why?"

"There's one," Fairchild raised his head and chipped away the softer surface of the rock, leaving a tubular protrusion of cement extending. Harry stared.

"What the bloody 'ell!" he conjectured. "D'you suppose—" Then, with a sudden resolution: "Drill there! Gad! a hole off to one side a bit and drill where. It seems to me Sissie Larsen put a hole or something—I can't remember. But drill. It can't do any harm."

The gad chipped away the rock. Soon the drill was biting into the surface of the foot wall. Quitting time came; the drill was in two feet, and in the morning, Fairchild went at his task again, pounding away at the long, six-foot drill with strokes that had behind them only muscles, not the intense driving power of hope. A foot he progressed into the foot wall and changed drills. Three inches more. Then—

"Harry!"

"What's 'appened?" The tone of Fairchild's voice had caused the Cornishman to lean from his staling and run to Fairchild's side. That person had cupped his hand and was holding it beneath the drill hole, while into it he was pulling the muck with the scraper and stirring it.

"This stuff's changed color," he exclaimed. "It looks like—"

"Let me see!" The older man took a portion of the blackish, gritty mass and held it close to his carbide. "It looks like something—it looks like something!" His voice was high, excited. "I'll finish the hole and jam enough dynamite in there to tear the insides out of it. I'll give 'er 'ell. But in the meantime, you take that down to the assayer!"

CHAPTER XV

Fairchild did not hesitate. Scraping the watery conglomeration into a tobacco can, he threw on his coat and ran for the shaft. Then he pulled himself up, singing and diving into the fresh-made drifts of a new storm as he started toward town; nor did he stop to investigate the fast-fading footprints of some one who evidently had passed the mine a short time before.

Into town and through it to the scrambling buildings of the Sampler, where the main products of the mines of Ohadi found their way before going to the smelter. There he swung wide the door and turned to the little room on the left, the sanctum of a white-haired, almost tottering old man who wandered about among his test tubes and "bureaus" as he figured out the various weights and values of the ores as the samples were brought in from the dirty, dusty, bin-filled rooms of the Sampler proper. A queer light came into the old fellow's eyes as he looked into those of Robert Fairchild.

"Don't get 'em too high!" he admonished, Fairchild stared.

"What?"

"Hopes, I've seen many a fellow come in just like you. I've been here thirty year. They call me Old Undertaker Chastine!"

Fairchild laughed.

"But I'm hoping."

"Yeh, Son." Undertaker Chastine looked over his glasses. "You're just all the rest. You're hoping. Trot 'em out and let the old Undertaker have a look at 'em."

Sobered now, Fairchild reached for his tobacco can, which had been stuffed full of every scrap of stuff that he and Harry had been able to drag from the powder hole. Evidently, his drill had been in the ore, whatever it was, for some time before he realized it; the can was heavy, exceedingly heavy, giving evidence of purity of something at least. But Undertaker Chastine shook his head.

Northern Lights Said to Be Due to Passage of Electricity Through the Air.

The aurora borealis (or northern lights) is occasionally seen in the north temperate zone and frequently in the polar regions. It is said to be due to the passage of electricity through the rarefied air of the arctic zone. The name "aurora borealis" was first used by Cassendi, who, in 1621, observed one in France, and wrote a description of it. The "aurora" is periodic in its manifestations, the finest displays being at intervals of 90 years, and less marked ones at intervals of 10 or 11 years. It is also asserted that these greater and lesser displays correspond with the increase and decrease of spots on the sun. The phenomenon is generally manifested in the following way: A thin light appears on the horizon shortly after twilight, and gradually assumes the shape of an arch, having a pale yellow color, with its concave side turned earthward. From this arch streams of light shoot forth, passing from yellow to green and then to brilliant violet. The name aurora australis (or southern lights) is applied to a similar phenomenon visible in the vicinity of the South pole.

Indians Copyrighted Totem Poles.

Copyright laws were framed long ago by the primitive Indians of British Columbia and Alaska to protect the quaint designs of their totem poles. They were instituted along exactly the same lines as followed by the white man today and were rigidly enforced. To be the owner of a totem pole was a sign of social position, rank, wealth and power. It took years of work, sometimes by very expensive artists, to carve the figures and crests relating to the traditions of the family that were in existence in the region was rigidly enforced, making the first workings of a copyright law in North America. Songs composed around the various totem poles were likewise copyrighted.

AMERICANISM WEEK, DEC. 3-9

Government, Legion and National Education Association Co-Operating to Make Program Success.

John J. Tigert, United States commissioner of education, declares a conviction that a great stride toward the goal of Americanism set by the American Legion as one of its greatest programs of service will be made in the week of December 3 to 9, inclusive, which has been proclaimed American Education week.

Commissioner Tigert and the National Education association are co-operating with the American Legion commission of the American Legion in making the week a success.

Announcement proclaiming the American Education week followed a conference in Washington between President Harding, Commissioner Tigert and Garland W. Powell, assistant national director of the Americanism commission. President Harding announced he would issue an official proclamation, followed by similar ones from governors of the states.

Commissioner Tigert, through the United States bureau of education, will request state and county superintendents of schools to devote the week to the American Legion program, which will start Sunday, December 3. Ministers of all denominations will be asked to preach sermons morning and evening that day on the benefits of education. Mass meetings will be held throughout the United States, at which speakers will be supplied by the American Legion.

Monday will have its special slogan—"Americans All by 1927"—with its drive throughout the country to assist immigrants and aliens to become good Americans, by starting their education in the duties of citizenship. Tuesday will be devoted to patriotism, with such subjects as "Universal Use of the English Language," "Music As a Nation Builder," "The Flag, Emblem of Freedom," and "The Citizen's Duty to Vote."

Wednesday, better pay for teachers and better schoolhouses will be featured. Thursday will be devoted particularly to the cure of illiteracy. Thursday will be a mighty war on Bolshevism, the strengthening of the fight to eradicate radicalism. Friday will be devoted to "An Equal Opportunity for All in Education," and Saturday, December 9, will be given over to the subject of physical education, the need of more and better playgrounds, the nation's need to develop our forests, the conservation of our soil and places of play in every community.

AUXILIARY MAY ADOPT THIS

Headress Fronted With Blue or Gold Star May Be Approved by the Women's Organization.

When pretty Thelma Sines of Logansport, Ind., donned the headpiece that she's wearing in the accompanying picture, and naively asked if it wasn't a perfectly wonderful creation for members of the American Legion Auxiliary to wear at conventions, conferences, etc., it hasn't been recorded what the Indiana women's reply was, but it Miss Thelma Sines.

It is known that the American Legion fellows who saw the picture immediately voted aye and urged its unanimous adoption.

Miss Sines' Auxiliary unit, No. 8 of Logansport, submitted the headpiece as the official one to be worn, but frankly confessed that the idea was really born at Columbus, Neb., where that city's American Legion Auxiliary unit presented it, and then Columbus replied that it really was the idea of some of the women of Louisiana.

At any rate, it seemed to be a popular idea—made more so, perhaps, by the wearer herewith shown. Miss Sines says she likes it, that it's cool and comfortable, and affords a distinctive headress for the organization.

It will be noted that the headress is fronted with a star. A gold star can be substituted for the ordained blue by those who lost loved ones in the service.

Monkey Reasons.

It used to be thought that beasts and birds were guided in their action entirely by instinct, reason playing no part whatever in their daily lives. But now naturalists are not so sure. To learn to use a lever as a mechanical instrument implies, one would think, a certain amount of reasoning power. Yet a monkey kept in captivity can play a stick to pry up the lid of a chest which was otherwise too heavy for the animal to raise.

Woman's Organization Growing.

The Auxiliary of the American Legion, said to be the fastest growing women's organization in America, has a membership of 110,000 in the 48 states, Alaska, Hawaii, the Canal zone, Cuba and Mexico. These women are divided into 5,000 posts.

Western Canada

Wonderful Stock Raising Country

Vast stretches of undeveloped fertile agricultural land of the highest productivity await the settler in Western Canada. The land possesses the same character of soil as that which has produced the high quality of cereals that have carried off the world's premier honors so many times in the past ten years.

Native Grasses are Rich and Abundant

Cattle fatten upon them without any grain being fed.

Limited capital on high priced lands is not a success, neither can the tenant burdened with high rents hope to succeed.

The place to overcome these is in Western Canada where land is cheap where a home may be made at low cost, and where arroyo, mixed farming and stock raising give an assured profit.

Land may be purchased from the Railway Companies or from responsible land companies or from private owners. Free homestead of 160 acres each are to be had in the more remote districts.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the winter is over and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the first indication of a cold appears and before it has become settled in the system. There is no danger in giving it to children as it contains no opium or other harmful drug.

A. HERMANN DIES AFTER OPERATION

FUNERAL HELD AT FORMER HOME IN OSCODA TUESDAY.

Adolph Hermann, after a number of weeks of illness submitted to a very serious operation at Harper Hospital Detroit, Friday morning at eight o'clock, passing away Saturday at mid night. Mr. Hermann although on the operating table two hours and 45 minutes came out of the anesthetic and recognized Mrs. Hermann, who has been at his bedside since he became ill.

Taken suddenly ill here at home his case baffled the local physician, who advised him to go to Detroit and consult physicians at Harper Hospital. Here physicians discovered after a series of examinations that there was a severe pressure on the brain which caused Mr. Hermann's illness. It was first believed that the ailment could be cured by medicine, but later complications developed and an operation was necessary to relieve him. With Mrs. Hermann at the time of Mr. Hermann's death was their son Alfred, who was called to the bedside of his father early in the week. His death was a severe shock to the family who, although knowing the operation was a serious one, were hoping for the best.

The remains of Mr. Hermann were taken directly from Detroit, accompanied by Mrs. Hermann and Alfred, to Oscoda, where the family formerly resided for many years, for burial. Mrs. Ollie McLeod and little daughter Helen Elaine, and Miss Vella Hermann of Grayling met them there Sunday, and remained until after the funeral.

Mr. Hermann was head sawyer for the Salling Hanson company in their saw mill, where he had been employed for the past years, he having come to Grayling from Onaway at that time. He was said to be a most efficient and steady workman, and was well liked by his fellow employees and had a large circle of friends. On the day of Mr. Hermann's funeral Tuesday, he would have celebrated his 48th birthday. His untimely passing is keenly felt by his wife and children with whom rest the sincere sympathy of hosts of friends.

SPORTSMEN ENJOY ANNUAL BANQUET

A GOODLY NUMBER PRESENT. WILD GOOSE ON MENU.

The first annual banquet of the Crawford County Sportsman's association was held at the Board of Trade rooms last evening. About fifty members sat down to one long table extending from one end of the room to the other. It was a delightful affair in every particular, and a more harmonious crowd of men would be hard to get together.

This association of sportsmen was organized for the purpose of promoting hunting of game and fishing, and for their conservation. It is a most worthy object and one that appeals to almost every red-blooded American citizen. This was the first banquet of the association and annual events of similar nature are mapped out for future programs.

In keeping with the spirit of the organization this was to be a wild game dinner and the members were requested to provide the game—partridge, duck and rabbits. Several responded, but the banquet committee, consisting of C. O. McCullough, chairman; Al. Cramer, Edwin S. Chalker and Alonzo Colten, decided to spring a surprise on the banqueters and served up eight wild geese. These had been shot a couple of days before, it was stated by one of the members, at a lake near Waters. It was a rare treat and the meat was delicious.

Special credit is due the committee for the fine way in which they handled the banquet and for the excellence of the food. The geese were prepared by some of the wives of the members, as was also some of the other things. It was served piping hot, the dining room being opened at about 6:45 p. m. The menu consisted of goose, partridge, duck, rabbit, dressing, mashed potatoes and gravy, vegetable salad on lettuce, cranberry sauce, pickles, small rolls and butter, apple and pumpkin pie at a mode, coffee and cigars.

After the dinner President M. Hanson greeted the members with a few remarks and told of the hopes and aims of the association. Matters pertaining to the work of the organization were discussed. A resolution was unanimously passed requesting the State Conservation department to close the main stream of the AuSable river within Crawford county every second mile, for the period of one year, and that the following year the water that was closed against fishing should be reopened and open sections be closed. This is the belief of the members, will give the trout a refuge from fishermen and tend toward increasing the supply of trout in that river.

Another resolution was unanimously passed, asking the Game department to close the East Branch river for fishing from the Hatchery to the bridge below Kneeland; and also the Main stream from the Electric light dam to the Wells-bridge near Frederic, for a period of five years.

Campfire stories were indulged in until a late hour when the nimble and disciples of Isaac Walton spilled out confessions of their experiences in hunting and fishing. Geo. L. Alexander gave a very interesting talk about the crayfish, a fish that at one time dominated the waters of the AuSable and other near-by rivers, and that are now extinct in these streams. The evening was a very enjoyable one through, and set a pattern for future events that will be hard to excel.

FARM BUREAU NOTES

County Agricultural Agent

LIMESTONE LEGUMES LIVESTOCK MEAN PROFITS IN FARMING

Roll 'Em Over!

Potatoes are dug. Corn shocked, and a lot of it husked. All of it should, by this time, be in silo or shed. What next?

Fall plowing is sure!

Fall plowing has many advantages in Northern Michigan; and the thrifty farmer will be doing a lot of it.

Some of these advantages are named below. Gets finished many days of work that would crowd us in the spring, and either go undone or be poorly done.

The action of frost is good for fall plowed soil. Sod becomes partly decayed by planting time. Vast numbers of insects and their eggs are killed by fall plowing, either by freezing or by being turned out so that birds can get them. Do not fall plow hillside with steep slope, for gullying may start.

Do not drag fall plowing. The rough surface catches and holds snow better.

Sod that is to be fall plowed should be covered thin with the valuable fertilizers from toilet, hen house, pig pen, and barn yard.

Having done this fall plowing, the farmer who is up and coming is then ready to spread his pulverized limestone right where it belongs, right on top, to be disced and dragged in.

Some Are Doing It.

As I drive along I note with much satisfaction that some are on the right track and are fall plowing.

Jens Hanson, Hans Peter Jensen and Al. Felling have nice big pieces turned over.

Go to it, gentlemen! Roll 'em over!

Nice Old Proverb.

How true it is that "The mill will never grind with the water that is past."

All farmers here have equal chance. The season is as long for one as for the other. Some will get fall plowing done, and some will not. The majority will not.

What will be the result? It will be this: Next spring many will not be in as large a field of oats, corn, potatoes or millet as they wanted to, nor as large a piece as they need, because "I did not have time to get the ground ready."

At the Forks of the Road.

Every morning we are at the forks of life's road. Upon a farmer's judgment, spunk, grit, courage, to choose the right one of those roads will largely depend his success.

Some, in fact most of us will choose the road marked "I won't bother now;" "Aw I guess I won't bother now, time enough in the spring;" "I want to go hunting;" "What's the use?" Next spring they will put in a little dab of this, and a little dab of that.

Next fall and winter they won't be able to keep many good cows because they do not have the feed. They won't have the cream, butter, or eggs to sell in any larger quantity than in the past.

They will not handle any more money than usual.

They won't have the money to fix up with. People driving by, will look with scorn, pity, or amusement on the place, and say: "Country not much good. See how things look."

For the Family's Sake. For the County's Sake.

For the sake of the family; for the sake of what people will say of the county, and of us as they pass, choose right; brother, as you stand at the forks of the road this morning, and roll 'em over; roll 'em over!

A Lady for the Ladies.

I have secured the promise of the State Home Demonstration Agent, from our Agricultural College, to give November 21 and 22 to the ladies of two country neighborhoods. Then, in a month, she will return, and so on two days a month.

We can pick our subjects from these: Dress Making; Millinery; Household Management; Health in the Home.

I wonder which two neighborhoods have a progressive lot of ladies who would like to have this lady demonstrator come. I think it would be wise to meet at nine, have pot luck dinner, and go home at three-thirty, don't you? Who will be first to apply?

Moving Pictures.

I have rented a moving picture machine, films and battery for the last week in November and the first week in December.

I intend to show these good pictures, free, in practically every school house and town hall in the county where people will give us the glad hand, invite us to supper, to stay all night, and will see that the building is warm and lighted.

I have seen these pictures. They are good! They are moving pictures and very entertaining and instructive.

On the Back Steps.

What a funny world this is!

When I call, at many farm homes, I am treated with all the cordiality that a long lost brother might receive. The kindly manner of the man of the house, and his wife, and the earnestness with which they urge me to stay to meals is heart warming.

And I am vain enough to think that, before I leave, I do that farm some good. But, oh you back steps! I am an expert on back steps, for how often do I stand there, with the dog smelling at my heels, and never get any farther!

Now, brother. No stolen property has ever been traced to me. I never call when I might spread measles or whooping cough or itch.

I can't do my best while standing humbly on the back steps.

Junior Red Cross Praised for Work Influencing Peace

The advancing standard of the Junior American Red Cross made two outstanding gains during the last year—one in the field of domestic activity, which is rapidly linking up the schools with the Junior program, the other a gain of a dozen countries in Europe pledged to organize Juniors on the lines of the American organization.

For this accomplishment the American Juniors earned the hearty endorsement of the League of Red Cross Societies for its "creation of an international spirit of human solidarity among young people with a view to preparation of a new civilization for peace."

The forthcoming annual report of the American Red Cross for the year ended June 30, 1922, will show 24,526 schools enrolled, with a total of 4,489,845 pupils wearing the "I Serve" button of the American Junior Red Cross—the badge of unselfish service earned by each individual member through personal sacrifice.

In international school correspondence 736 classes and schools engaged in friendly communication with 623 schools in European countries, 90 schools in United States territories, 18 in South Africa and 10 in a miscellaneous list of foreign countries. The work in foreign fields in establishing playgrounds, school libraries, sewing and manual training classes, homes for war orphans, school reconstruction in devastated areas, encouraging community gardens and many other activities was financed through the National Children's Fund raised by the Juniors at a cost of $38,527.66.

During the year $54,922.75 was contributed toward the fund, in which on July 1 there was a balance of $201,281.59.

Robert Hoover Backs Townsend

Robert Hoover, in his recent Detroit speech, put the duty of the voter in Michigan squarely before them.

"If you demand public servants like U. S. Senator Charles E. Townsend, you demand the efficiency of your government proportionately. There is a tremendous responsibility upon the citizens of Michigan to return to Washington Senator Townsend, who has thoroughly mastered the intricate machinery of the federal government and who brings proven experience to bear in the government's efforts to solve the unusual problems inherited from the world war which it now is facing."

These statements form an appeal to Michigan to re-elect Senator Townsend on November 7 for the general good of the nation. Coming from a man as independent in thought and judgment as Mr. Hoover, such an appeal should carry great weight. Mr. Hoover also stated:

"One of the reasons why a seasoned, experienced Senator like Senator Townsend is facing opposition for election at this time is because in the twelve years he has been in the United States Senate he has stayed in committee rooms where 99 per cent of the work of the senate is done, and has neglected the so-called purely political side of public office."

This is true. Senator Townsend has depended for re-election on his record in office, not on devoting much of his energy to building up "political fences" in his home state, while neglecting his work in the national capital. Mr. Townsend's opponents do not dare to assail this record on any material point.

WOMEN STUDYING ISSUES

"What is your impression of women's interest in politics?" was asked in Washington of a senator just returned from touring his state.

"They are taking lots of interest," was his reply. "I believe the women are studying the issues more than the men are."

In most states women have taken a very active interest in the primary elections. Republican women's organizations are flourishing everywhere, even in the south. From Maine to California women are turning out in great numbers to political meetings to hear the orators. They are not doing all the listening, either, for almost every program includes at least one woman speaker. These hold up their end very satisfactorily.

Nobody is surprised at the announcement that several thousand swivel chairs are for sale in Washington. This is not a swivel chair administration. But you didn't hear of any bargain sales of this kind between 1912 and 1920. —Kansas City Journal.

Why Change?

Would any American Workman change places with a Workman in Europe? We are sitting in the golden seat of the World.

Young "Teddy" Roosevelt said in Detroit:

"Two years ago government bonds were selling at 85 cents on the dollar. That's what the Democrats gave us."

"Now government bonds are selling at par. That's what we did," rang the Roosevelt challenge.

"There was general unemployment through the country near the end of the Democratic administration. That's what they did."

"There is practically no unemployment now, after only two years of Republicanism. That's what we did."

"Two years ago the Democrats were trying to induce us to enter a chimerical League of Nations, wherein the United States, if it entered, would have forfeited part of its national sovereignty. They wanted to make America the tail of the European international kite. You who have seen of the trouble around the Dardanelles must be glad we are out of it. But that's what they wanted."

VOTE NOVEMBER 7 for the re-election of United States Senator Charles E. Townsend, Governor Alex J. Groesbeck and the whole Republican Ticket.

SENATOR TOWNSEND is opposed to the U. S. entering the League of Nations. Were we in the League today the blood of American boys would be staining the sands of Asia Minor in a war that would serve only the selfish interests of Europe.

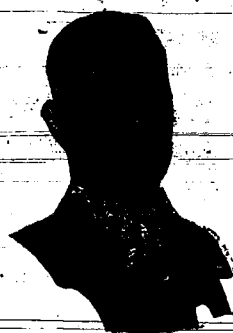

SENATOR TOWNSEND is the National Leader of the Great St. Lawrence Waterway Project, which will give lake ports direct access to the sea. He is the National Good Roads Leader, sponsor of Welfare Laws Governing Child Labor and Virile Worker for all Real Progressive Legislation.

In voting for Townsend you vote for America's best interests.

GOVERNOR GROESBECK is giving Michigan an efficient, economical, able administration. In the past year he and the State Administrative Board have saved the State $1,839,617.63 in expenses. The general tax levy for 1922 is $3.40,489.85 less than that of 1921, and the lowest since 1918. Even greater accomplishments are expected next year.

In voting for Groesbeck you vote for Michigan's best interests.

FOR County Clerk

Election Nov. 7, 1922.

As a life long resident of Crawford County I am pledged to your service, not only by actual training and practical experience, but with the fullest measure of civic pride and loyalty.

During the year past the responsibilities of your County Clerk's office have increased to such a condition that the proper and careful handling of the affairs of this office are of the most serious concern to the people of this county inasmuch that consideration should be taken of the importance of having the records of this department correctly and accurately handled. I refer particularly to the Uniform Accounting System, which practically makes the Clerk's office an Accounting department for the entire county business.

Results achieved have received the commendation of state officials, and I trust of my fellow citizens.

Your personal inspection of the records of this office at any time is invited, and I assure you of an honest administration of all business incident thereto, in the future as in the past.

COAL BARONS ARE REAPING HARVEST

PUBLIC NOW PAYING FOR COST OF INDUSTRIAL WAR IN HIGHER PRICES.

OPERATORS WIN EITHER WAY

State Regulation Only Expected to Be Partial Success in Restraining Extortion From Consumers.

Washington—The public's pocketbook nerve—most sensitive of all nerves in the body politic—is now feeling the effect of industrial war losses. These losses are huge. The public has begun liquidating the bill for the frays between capital and labor by paying higher prices on some of the chief necessities of life. Higher prices on articles that are indispensable in the households of the land may go through the entire winter and into next spring because of this year's periodical labor scrap.

High cost of coal will be at the root of most of the financial burdens of the people. Everything that industry manufactures will take on an added cost, because the overhead charges of operation are thereby increased.

Only the coal barons will derive comfort from this new era of inflation. State price control, now relied upon by the federal government to hold prices of fuel in check, can be at best only a partial success in restraining extortion. The coal operators figure to win in any event. It is no secret that they have laid their plans to double their normal profits on all coal sold this winter. In the end they will lose nothing by the long tie-up in the mines.

First results of the industrial war which has embroiled both railroad and coal industries was recession in commercial and industrial activity. Industrial activity slowed down considerably because of scarcity of coal supplies. The difficulties of transportation have also been a retarding factor to business. As winter approaches these troubles probably will become aggravated.

SAYS FRANCE IS NOT INDEBTED

Frank W. Cole Convicted of Killing Neighbor in Quarrel.

Paw Paw, Mich.—After five hours' deliberation, a jury returned a verdict of murder of the second degree in the trial of Frank W. Cole, charged with slaying William Baldwin, his neighbor. He showed little emotion when the jury made known its decision.

The testimony, the last day of the trial, had to do with the widow's dramatic story of her husband's death and the introduction of a crude sign Cole had posted on the tract of land in dispute between the two neighbors.

The land, worth only about $30, was the cause of the shooting. The placard bore the significant warning: "No trespassing; Baldwin beware."

U. S. MUST BE READY FOR WAR

Pershing's Aide Declares There Is No Foretelling of Future.

New York—There can be no end to war as long as human nature is what it is. No statesman is wise enough to foretell when the United States will be plunged into war again. Therefore the only policy for the United States is preparedness for war.

Such was the warning sounded by Major General Harbord, General Pershing's right hand man as deputy chief of staff, at a dinner of the Army and Navy club.

The minimum number required, they reported, should be 150,000 enlisted men and 13,000 officers.

Nervous Prostration Hits Rich.

Chicago—Nervous prostration is a disease of the "luxurious tribe," Dr. Francis G. Peabody, dean of Harvard University, declared. Speaking on the subject "Work and Rest" he declared that "where one scrub woman has a nervous breakdown, there are 100 of the idle rich with the same ailment." "This," he said, "is because the so-called idle rich neither work nor rest, because resting is not a state of doing nothing or lapsing into stupid discuse, but is a new form of activity."

Girls' Insurance Risk Greater.

London—Henceforth in Switzerland the girl who wears a low-necked dress and wishes to insure herself will have to pay a much higher premium than the girl who wears a dress buttoned up to her throat. Several Swiss insurance companies who accept illness risks have notified their women clients that premiums will be increased 15 per cent from Nov. 1 to certain of their sex. This action, they declare, has become necessary owing to losses resulting from the wearing of low-necked dresses, short skirts and high heels.

the huge Goliath airplanes engaged in the Paris-London aerial service a com-equipment of 35 watts antenna output,

Influence of New Clothes

One thing is certain. A man does not have a new suit of clothes every day; and another general proposition may be advanced, that a man in sporting a coat for the first time is either aggravated or disgustedly affected or not affected at all—which latter case I don't believe. There is no man, however accustomed to new clothes, but feels some sentiment of pride in assuming them—no philosopher, however calm, but must remark the change of reindeer. Men consent to wear old clothes forever—nay, feel a pang at parting with them for new;

but the first appearance of a new garment is always attended with exultation.—From Thackeray.

Greeley Had Learned Wisdom.
When, after the death of Virginia,
there was talk of Poe marrying again,
Horace Greeley wrote to a friend:
"Do you know Sarah Helen Whitman? Of course you have heard it rumored that she is to marry Poe. Well, she seemed to me a good girl, and you know what Poe is. Now, I know a widow of doubtful age will marry almost any sort of a white man, but this seems to me a terrible conjunction. Has Mrs. Whitman no friend within your knowledge that can faithfully explain Poe to her?"

"I never attempted this sort of thing but once, and the net result was two enemies and a hastening of the marriage."—From "Poe the Man" by The Editor.

PLAN TO CONTROL WEATHER

Scheme Has Been the Dream of Many Scientists, but Nothing Practical Has Been Evolved.

Three or four years ago a Sheffield (Eng.) workman claimed to be putting the finishing touches to an instrument to enable him "to focus beams of ether oscillation" and so control the weather. Unfortunately, the instrument could not have been so perfect as he thought, for nothing further has been heard of it. Before that a Leeds scientist had come to the conclusion that it was "within the scope of human possibility to prevent disastrous cyclones, hurricanes and storms, and even to improve permanently the weather of the British Isles." The idea was the production of an instru-

the atmosphere, securing the degree of density desired, and so arranging

The Observant Newsdealer.

Of course the Woman knows her newsdealer well. He is very friendly.
The other day she stopped in for some additional magazines and papers to take with her for a day's outing she was to have. She thought she was looking quite well—that is, she fancied she had managed to make herself look smart without putting on her best clothes.

The newsdealer seemed quite delighted to think she was going to have a day in which to rest and idle.
"It's fine," he said, "And you can have a real good time with your old clothes and all."

There are not infrequently substan-

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tin) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages), for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal

by boiling fully 20 minutes.

The two forms are equally delicious and the cost is only about 14c per cup.

COAL OF VEGETABLE ORIGIN

Abundant Proof That Huge Forests,
In Former Epochs of the Earth,
Became Petrified.

Although in most instances there are comparatively few traces of its vegetable origin left, coal owes its existence to the vast masses of vegetable matter deposited through the luxuriant growth of plants in former epochs of the earth's history, and since slowly converted into a petrified state.

Coal fields, today present abundant indications of the existence of huge ancient forests, usually in the form of coal formed from the roots of trees.
Several such forests have been uncovered, one of which in Nova Scotia is a good example. Remains of trees have been found there six to eight feet in height and four feet in diameter. In a colliery in England, in a space of about one-quarter of an acre, there have been found the fossilized stumps of 73 trees, with roots attached, and broken-off trunks lying about, one of them 30 feet long, and all of them turned into coal.

one. I was a senior in a large uni-

One evening I had been studying at a table in the library reading room when the lights went out. I stood up and collided with some one. I instinctively threw out my arms, and he fell likewise.

Of course, the lights went on suddenly, and I found myself embraced and embracing my ex-fiance. Everyone saw us, and we made quite a scene trying to get out.—Chicago Trib-

AUTO CLUB HEAD FIGHTS GAS TAX

DALLS PROPOSED PLAN TO MULCT CAR OWNERS FOR FUEL THEY USE UNJUST.

PAY ENOUGH NOW IN TAXES

If Additional Money is Needed to Run State Affairs Conference Should Be Called to Work Out Plan.

BY COL. SIDNEY D. WALDON
President Detroit Automobile Club

Certain interests in the State of Michigan are advocating a tax on all gasoline used within the borders of the State. They have been openly working for the measure for some months to develop sentiment in favor of additional taxation for the man who owns a motor car. It is their intention, they intimate, to go before the Legislature in January, 1923, and ask that body to enact a law that will require every user of gasoline to pay a tax of one cent or more per gallon on all they purchase.

As is usually the case in tax matters the proponents of the plan are proceeding under the assumption that anything used in connection with an automobile is readily taxable. They seem to feel it is the duty of the more than 500,000 motor car owners in Michigan to dig into their purses just because somebody happens to think this a good way to raise money.

Auto Made Michigan.

If there is one State in the Union where unjust taxes should not be saddled on to the motor car it is Michigan. The motor car has been the making of the Wolverine State industrially. Had not this wonder industry in Michigan the State would be industrially where it was a decade back. We all know Michigan was not among the industrial leaders, though she is today, and the motor car is to be thanked for the progress made.

The motorists of Michigan and the United States are already paying their fair share and perhaps more of the taxes. Take, for instance, the main tax levies of which there are five. These may be listed as follows:

1. National income taxes common on all individuals.
2. Sales tax paid by the manufacturer and passed on by him to the owner, and limited to the automobile and a few other industries.
3. Taxes on repair parts: a permanent charge on the life of all automobiles, whether they pay for it or not, a tax specific to the automobile.
4. State license and registration fees, a virtual monopoly to the automobilist.
5. Scattering taxes, such as driver's license, chauffeur's license, certificate of title, etc.

Motorists Pay Millions.

Bureau of Internal Revenue figures for 1920, the latest available in Governmental reports, show that the public treasury collected in round figures $267,000,000 in special and discriminatory taxes on automobiles in the year. The Federal Government took $149,000,000, the States $107,000,000, and Municipalities $11,000,000.

A study of tax figures in Michigan is interesting. It reveals that personal and real property pay only 2.30 percent on assessed valuation, while motor cars pay 5.12 percent. Almost 100 per cent more. These figures are based on State figures for 1921, personal and real property value being $5,483,635,114, while cars are worth $131,814,862. The real and personal property pays $158,388,566.57, and the automobiles $6,764,994.61.

When a Michigan man buys a Ford car he must pay taxes equalling approximately 7 percent of the cost of the car. The United States takes part, and Michigan the rest. Is any other property as heavily taxed?

Many people have tentatively assented to a tax of one or more cents per gallon because they have been told it is a small item and because they do not realize how much the motor car owner is already paying in taxes on his vehicle.

Would Cost $4,000,000.

Figures supplied the Detroit Automobile Club by the Standard Oil Co. and Sinclair Refining Co., the largest gasoline dealers in Michigan, show that motorists of Michigan will be forced to pay approximately $4,000,000 per annum if they accept the gasoline tax. This sum is based on gasoline sales in 1921. Are the motor car owners of Michigan ready to hand over this amount just to satisfy the whim of some group of tax proponents?

The idea seems to be to tax the automobile when in doubt. It is assumed that the motorist is "easy" and will not object to a little more taxation. Even if more money is needed to operate the State Government no tax of any kind should be founded on reasons of expediency such as ease of collection or ability to pay. Every tax should be based on rules of justice and equality.

The gasoline tax is not just, inasmuch as motorists are already paying a fair share of Michigan's taxes. If more money is needed to conduct the State's affairs some equitable way of assessing the additional tax should be worked out. It cannot be found in the present plan as promoted and advocated by certain citizens of Michigan who seem ready to tax the automobile at every turn.

WHY PLANT SHRUBS IN THE FALL?

The Autumn is generally considered to be the very best planting season for shrubs. If set out then, they will have fully two months more of growth than if they are set out in the springtime, which will provide much more strength to withstand the usual summer drought, which is the greatest enemy of newly set shrubs, even though planting has been done most carefully and properly.

At this season of the year, furthermore, there is far more time to devote to the careful planting of the shrubs, than if one waits until the spring. The run of summer work is over, most of the important gardening has been accomplished and now have time in which to properly plan where the shrubs may be suitably established and just what spot in the garden awaits the special variety that is appropriate for it.

When the impulse is with us to do shrub planting, we had better follow it, as if we wait until next spring's garden work again seizes us, the shrub planting may be postponed indefinitely.

A PRESIDENT OF COURAGE AND CONVICTIONS

In his action yesterday with regard to the bonus legislation President Harding revealed himself to the American people as a man of courage and as a Chief Executive who puts sacred duty ahead of personal, political consideration.

In returning the bonus measure to Congress without his approval, and in opposition to the tremendous pressure of his own party, President Harding, in a consideration for the common sense of the situation, with the Government staggering as it is under its enormous burden of debt.

The President's objections to the measure as set forth in his message are so sound, and so clear, and so convincing, that they will have the influence of all thinking Americans. There is no escape for the unbiased and unprejudiced mind from complete concurrence in the logic, the truth and the force of the President's unanswerable argument.

For courage, for deep sense of duty, for splendid guardianship of the sacred trust he assumed as President of the United States, there has been nothing finer in any act of any Chief Executive since the founding of the Government.

Whatever the cost to Mr. Harding's political future doesn't matter, since it is a bigger thing and a better thing for the President of the United States to be right, to be honest with the job he holds, to be honest with the people who gave him his great trust than to be returned for a second term to that great trust.

But the truth is that the man who disregards selfish considerations for conscientious public service strengthens himself with the people. It is the coward who cringes to political clamor, not the strong man, and Mr. Harding now stands out before the American people, and the world, as a man who, as the strength and the force of character to make good in a supreme test between selfishness and duty.

MAKING PROFITS ON REAL ESTATE

The movement to induce people to make an effort to own their own home should show them how they can often turn a handsome profit by buying real estate. Many houses are sold much below their true value because they have been allowed to lapse into an unattractive condition. They may be substantially built, but the lack of sufficient painting and paint makes them look unimpressive.

An enterprising and industrious owner can make money on places of that character, and there are chances of that kind in Grayling if one is skilled with tools, he can make many repairs for himself. Improvement of the lawn and setting out shrubs, trees, and flowers will transform a once shabby looking home, and make it a nest of beauty.

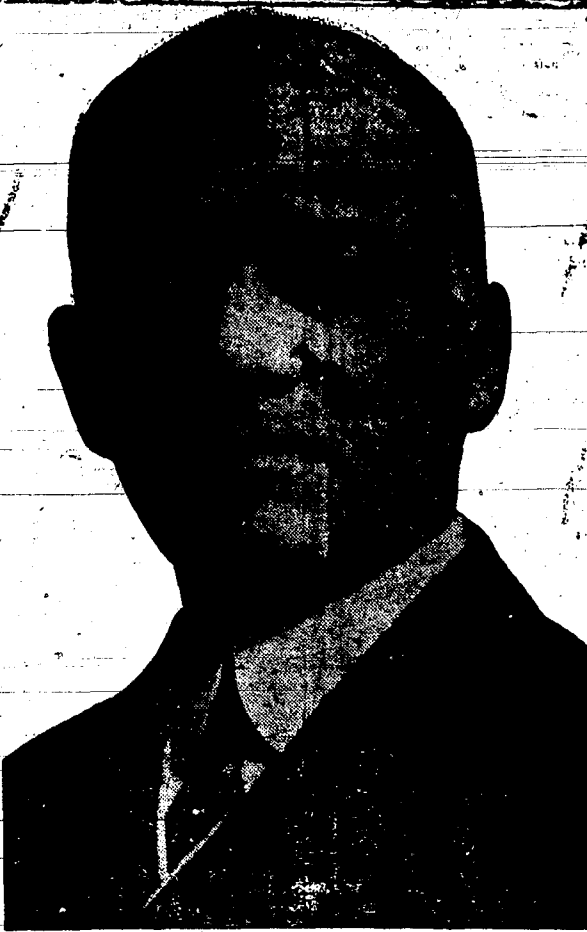

The result of such an effort is commonly to induce the neighbors to clean up and improve their property. Thus streets once disorderly and unbecoming for begin to take on new style and spirit. Purchasers like to move into such a location, and real estate owners find that values have enhanced without much money being spent. If sales are made, the gains are usually much greater than if the money invested had been on interest.

In most towns there are enterprising men who have turned a handsome profit by buying such places that sold at low prices because of their unattractive condition. Then they turned them up by repairs and decoration, persuaded their neighbors to join in the development, and lifted the location to a better level on which property could be sold at a good profit.

But people who make such improvements usually become so attached to the home thus developed, into which they have put their labor and love, that the possession of the place means more than any dollars they could turn on such a deal. The existence of this spirit of development is a blessing to a community, and will go far to attract new residents and bring civic advantages.

THE CHOICE OF FRIENDS AND READING.

Your family is worth the best you can give it. You desire for their enjoyment the best house, the best food, the best clothes that you can afford.

And you are very careful that they cultivate the right kind of friends. But are you just as careful about choosing the right kind of reading?

You should be, for reading has a marked influence upon character; especially the reading that comes under the eyes of the younger and impressionable. If you choose The Youth's Companion you are giving your family an acquaintance with the best there is in periodical literature. If you see The Companion in a house you may be sure it is a safe family to tie up to a family worth knowing. Try it for a year and see.

A TIMELY SUGGESTION.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the winter is over and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the first indication of a cold appears and before it has become settled in the system. There is no danger in giving it to children, as it contains no opium or other harmful drug.

WHY THAT LAME BACK?

That morning lameness—those sharp pains when bending or lifting, make work a burden and rest impossible. Don't let it handicap you by a bad back—look for your kidneys. You will never mistake by following this Grayling resident's example.

"Mrs. Peter F. Jorgenson, says: 'My back ached all the time and it was hard for me to do my housework. When I did the least bit of work sharp pains darted through my back and I suffered a great deal with lame back. I was tired, nervous and all run down and worried so much I became depressed and irritable. I had dizzy headaches and black specks passed before my eyes. My kidneys were weak and irregular in action and I couldn't sleep well at night. I heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and I purchased several boxes at Lewis' Drug Store, and they cured me in a splendid way.'

HOW NOT TO TAKE COLD.

Some persons are subject to frequent colds, while others, seldom, if ever, have a cold. You will find the latter take good care of themselves. They take a shower or cold sponge bath every day in a warm room, avoid over heated rooms, see with a window open or partly open avoid excesses, over eating, becoming over heated and then chilled and getting the feet wet. Then, when they feel the first indication of a cold, they take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy without delay and it is soon over.
